East Asia Seminar Lesson Plan One – Lost Names

Class: 9th Grade World History

Lesson Length: Two 55 minute class periods

Resources: Prentice Hall World History copyright 2009 Chapter 32, Section 2 (Rwandan Genocide) Digital Copies Included

"Lost Names" chapter form the book Lost Names by Richard E. Kim

Content Standards: 7.1.3 Twentieth Century Genocide – Use various sources including works of journalists, journals, oral histories, films, interviews, and writings of participants to analyze the causes and consequences of the genocides of Armenians, Romas (Gypsies), and Jews, and the mass exterminations of Ukrainians and Chinese. (See 7.2.3)

CG4 Conflict, Cooperation, and Security Analyze the causes and challenges of continuing and new conflicts by describing
• causes of and responses to ethnic cleansing/genocide/mass extermination (e.g., Darfur, Rwanda, Cambodia, Bosnia)

Objectives: Students will thoroughly read the text provided and use their background knowledge of other genocides (Holocaust, Armenia, and Rwanda etc...) to compare the Japanese attempt at cultural genocide in Korea.

Prior Learning: Students will have already been studying the concept of genocide and previous examples of it in various times and regions in World History.

Guiding Question: Compare the various genocides that we have already studied in this class (Rwanda, Armenia, and the Holocaust) with the Japanese attempt to erase the culture of Korea.

Procedure: DAY 1:
15 minutes to review previous examples of genocides with details of specific actions taken and the major details and causes of the genocides (Use of a Graphic Organizer on the Smart Board, access prior knowledge and earlier portions of the textbook)
10 minutes to review the major events prior to WWII in the Pacific including the Japanese colonization of Korea and the conquest of Manchuria.

25 minutes for students to read the excerpt from Lost Names (the “Lost Names” chapter) in small groups (3-4 students). Each group will need to read and analyze the text, taking notes on the major events in the excerpt. Students should also list any questions they may have about the reading including vocabulary and background. Some students may have to take the text home to finish the reading.

5 minutes to briefly go over and debrief the major events of the sections

DAY 2:
20 minutes for student groups to report out their analysis of the excerpt, ask questions, make comparisons with other genocides. This will use the Smartboard so students can take notes from other people’s observations.

20 minutes to model a short essay comparing one of the other genocides with the information from the excerpt. Students will be expected to express similarities and differences beyond just other genocides resulted in death.

Final 15 Minutes for students to write a short (3 paragraphs) essay in response to the guiding question. Students should include specific examples from the textbook and from the reading of Lost Names. Students will complete this writing outside of class and turn it in the next class day.

Assessment: The essay that will be turned in the next class day.

Objectives
As you teach this section, keep students focused on the following objectives to help them answer the Section Focus Question and master core content.

- Describe how the Axis powers came to control much of Europe, but failed to conquer Britain.
- Summarize Germany's invasion of the Soviet Union.
- Understand the horror of the genocide the Nazis committed.
- Describe the role of the United States before and after joining World War II.

Prepare to Read

Build Background Knowledge
Remind students that the German attack on Poland signaled the outbreak of the war. Ask them to preview the section and predict what will happen next.

Set a Purpose
- WITNESS HISTORY Read the selection aloud or play the audio.
- Set a Purpose Ask how does Janina describe the German attack on Poland? (Sample: loud, destructive, confusing, horrifying)
- Focus Point out the Section Focus Question and write it on the board. Tell students to refer to this question as they read. (Answer appears with Section 2 Assessment answers.)
- Preview Have students preview the Section Objectives and the list of Terms, People, and Places.
- Note Taking Have students read this section using the Structured Read Aloud Strategy (TE, p. 220). As they read, have students fill in the flowchart sequencing events in World War II.

The Axis Advances

Diplomacy and compromise had not satisfied the Axis powers' hunger for empire. Western democracies hoped that appeasement would help establish a peaceful world order. But Nazi Germany, Fascist Italy, and imperial Japan plunged ahead with their plans for conquest.

The Axis Attacks
On September 1, 1939, Nazi forces stormed into Poland, revealing the enormous power of Hitler's blitzkrieg, or "lightning war." The blitzkrieg utilized improved tank and airpower technology to strike a devastating blow against the enemy. First, the Luftwaffe, or German air force, bombed airfields, factories, towns, and cities, and sneaking dive bombers filled the skies over troops and civilians. Then, fast-moving tanks and troop transporters pushed their way into the defending Polish army, encircling whole divisions of troops and forcing them to surrender.

While Germany attacked from the west, Stalin's forces invaded from the east, grabbing lands promised to them under the Nazi-Soviet Pact. Within a month, Poland ceased to exist. Because Poland's location and the speed of the attacks, Britain and France could do nothing to help beyond declaring war on Germany.

Hitler passed the winter without much further action. Stalin's armies, however, forced the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia, and
The Miracle of Dunkirk During that first winter, the French hunkered down behind the Maginot Line. Britain sent troops to wait with them. Some reporters referred to this quiet time as the "phony war." Then, in April 1940, Hitler launched a blitzkrieg against Norway and Denmark, both of which soon fell. Next, his forces slammed into the Netherlands and Belgium.

In May, German forces surprised the French and British by attacking through the Ardennes Forest in Belgium, an area that was considered invulnerable. Bypassing the Maginot Line, German troops poured into France. Retreating German forces were soon trapped between the Nazi army and the English Channel. In a desperate gamble, the British sent all available naval vessels, merchant ships, and even fishing and pleasure boats across the channel to pluck stranded troops off the beaches of Dunkirk. Despite German air attacks, the improvised armada ferried more than 300,000 troops to safety in Britain. This heroic rescue raised British morale.

France Falls Meanwhile, German forces headed south toward Paris. Italy declared war on France and attacked from the south. Overrun and demoralized, France surrendered. On June 22, 1940, Hitler forced the French to sign the surrender documents in the same railroad car in which Germany had signed the armistice ending World War I. Following the surrender, Germany occupied northern France. In the south, the Germans set up a "puppet state," with its capital at Vichy (vee-shay). Some French officers escaped to England and set up a government-in-exile. Led by Charles de Gaulle, these "free French" worked to liberate their homeland. Within France, resistance fighters used guerrilla tactics against German forces.

Operation Sea Lion With the fall of France, Britain stood alone in Western Europe. Hitler was sure that the British would fall for peace. But Winston Churchill, who had replaced Neville Chamberlain as prime minister, had other plans. Faced with this defiance, Hitler made plans for Operation Sea Lion—the invasion of Britain. In preparation for the invasion, he launched massive air strikes against the island nation.

Beginning in August 1940, German bombers began a daily bombardment of England's southern coast. For almost four months, Britain's Royal Air Force valiantly battled the Luftwaffe. Then, the Germans changed their tactics. Instead of bombing military targets in the south, they began to bomb London and other cities.

Germany Launches the Blitz German bombers first appeared over London late on September 7, 1940. All through the night, relays of aircraft showered high explosives and firebombs on the sprawling capital. The bombing continued for 57 nights in a row and then sporadically until the next May. These bombing attacks are known as "the Blitz." Much of London was destroyed, and thousands of people lost their lives.

The Trick of the Hitler Two-Step After the surrender of France, the Western Allies saw news reels and photographs that seemingly showed a delighted Hitler doing a victory dance on the very spot where Germany had surrendered at the close of World War I. This humiliating image was continually shown in movie theaters and newspapers across Britain, the United States, and Canada. It enraged viewers. However, the footage was really a clever editing trick by propagandist John Grierson, then the managing director of Canada's Warime Information Board. When he received footage of Hitler stamping his foot once, he edited the frames and looped them to show Hitler doing a dance. The Allies then continuously aired the fake footage to rally the public to join the war effort.

Vocabulary Builder
available—(uh VAY ul uh bul ed) adj. ready for use; at hand

Instruct

- Introduce: Vocabulary Builder Have students read the Vocabulary Builder term and definition. Ask How did Germany use the technology available to it to strike at the Allies? (Germany used airplanes and high explosives in a "blitz" against its enemies.) Explain to students that blitz is short for blitzkrieg, which means "lightning war" in German.

- Teach Trace the Axis advance at the beginning of the war. Ask How did the Axis powers achieve victories in 1939 and 1940? (by striking fast, using the awesome power of modern technology, and never giving the enemy time to prepare or defend itself) Which side do you think was winning at the end of 1942? (the Axis because they controlled most of Europe and had won important victories in Africa)

- Quick Activity Have students look at the Battle of Britain. To begin, read aloud or play the audio selection from the Primary Source. Then direct students to look at the Infographic on Surviving the Blitz, on the next page, and play that audio selection. Discuss the many ways in which the war hurt ordinary people. Then remind students that Britain had a strong navy. Ask Why do you think the air strikes were important to Germany's plan to invade Britain? (Because Britain had a strong navy, Germany would need to ensure that it had control of the air in order to successfully invade the country.)

Independent Practice
Have students write a series of six to eight newspaper headlines that summarize the course of the war from the invasion of Poland to the German decision to break off the Battle of Britain. Encourage them to include not only battles but also important speeches by leaders involved in the war. Remind them that newspaper headlines should be short but informative.

Monitor Progress
- As students fill in their flowcharts, circulate to make sure they are sequencing the events in Europe and in Africa correctly. For a completed version of the flowchart, see Note Taking Transparencies, 185A
- To review each country's status in 1941, ask students to create a three-column chart with the headings Free of German Control, Axis Power, and Conquered by Axis.

SURVIVING THE BLITZ

From 1940 to 1941, Germany tried to paralyze Britain into submission during a months-long bombing campaign known as "the blitz." From September through May, German pilots targeted London and other cities with night after night of bombing, but other cities such as Liverpool, Glasgow, and Belfast became targets too. These nighttime raids sent ordinary civilians scrambling for safety—in crowded public shelters, in homemade shelters, or even in the London Underground. During the blitz, German bombers killed more than 40,000 British civilians and damaged millions of homes. Some 800,000 British civilians were made homeless by the blitz.

Nearly three million people were evacuated from Britain's cities to the safer countryside.

Small gestures of kindness helped Londoners deal with the effects of bombing raids.

London did not break under the blitz. Defiantly, Parliament continued to meet. Civilians carried on their daily lives, seeking protection in shelters and then emerging to resume their routines when the all-clear sounded. Even the British king and queen chose to support Londoners by joining them in bomb shelters rather than fleeing to the countryside.

Hitler Fails to Take Britain German planes continued to bomb London and other cities off and on until May 1941. But contrary to Hitler's hopes, the Luftwaffe could not gain air superiority over Britain, and British morale was not destroyed. In fact, the bombing only made the British more determined to turn back the enemy. Operation Sea Lion was a failure.

Africa and the Balkans Axis armies also pushed into North Africa and the Balkans. In September 1940, Mussolini ordered forces from Italy's North African colony of Libya into Egypt. When the British army repulsed these invaders, Hitler sent one of his most brilliant commanders, General Erwin Rommel, to North Africa. The "Desert Fox," as he was called, chalked up a string of successes in 1941 and 1942. He pushed the British back across the desert toward Cairo, Egypt.

In October 1940, Italian forces invaded Greece. They encountered stiff resistance, and in 1941 German troops once again provided reinforcements. Both Greece and Yugoslavia were added to the growing Axis empire. Even after the Axis triumph, however, Greek and Yugoslav

Link to Science

The Role of Radar Britain's Royal Air Force (RAF) was greatly outnumbered during the Battle of Britain, but it managed to fend off German attacks with remarkable success. One reason for this success was a new technology: radar (short for radio detecting and ranging), in which high frequency radio waves were emitted from stations. When those waves hit an object—like a German plane—they bounced off it and were sent back to the transmitter. A signal then appeared on a screen showing the object's distance, direction, and, over time, speed. Britain had 21 long-range radar stations that could detect an enemy plane at a distance of 140 miles (225 kilometers). Reports from radar stations were fed to an information clearing-house near London. There, experts tracked the movements of enemy planes and telephoned information to RAF headquarters, which could order planes into the air to meet each attack.
Germany Invades the Soviet Union

Instruct

- Introduce: Vocabulary Builder Have students read the Vocabulary Builder term and definition. Ask How did Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union nullify the Nazi-Soviet Pact? (Hitler had promised that Germany would not fight the Soviet Union.)

- Teach Ask Why did Hitler want to conquer the Soviet Union? (He wanted its resources and he wanted to crush communism in Europe and break Stalin's power.) How far did German troops advance in the first few months? (They reached deep into the Soviet Union and were about to capture Moscow and Stalingrad.) What prevented the Germans from gaining victory? (Stout defenses of those cities and Stalingrad; the winter weather) How did Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union work against him? (It led to cooperation between the Soviet Union and Britain and tied up troops and supplies with a fierce new enemy.)

Checkpoint Which regions fell under Axis rule between 1939 and 1941?

Germany Invades the Soviet Union

After the failure in Britain, Hitler turned his military might to a new target—the Soviet Union. The decision to invade the Soviet Union helped relieve Britain. It also proved to be one of Hitler's costliest mistakes.

An Unstoppable German Army Stalls In June 1941, Hitler nullified the Nazi-Soviet Pact by invading the Soviet Union in Operation Barbarossa, a plan which took its name from the medieval Germanic leader, Frederick Barbarossa. Hitler made his motives clear. “If I had the Urals Mountains with their incalculable store of treasures in raw materials,” he declared, “Siberia with its vast forests, and the Ukraine with its tremendous wheat fields, Germany under National Socialist leadership would swim in plenty.” He also wanted to crush communism in Europe and defeat his powerful rival, Stalin.

Independent Practice
Tell students to take the role of someone living in Leningrad in 1942, during the German siege. Have them write a journal entry describing what life was like within the city, including the shelling from German artillery, the physical destruction, and the difficulties of finding food and water. Encourage them to describe how they feel about the hardships they face. Invite volunteers to share their journal entries with the class.

Monitor Progress
To review this section, ask What role did the climate of the Soviet Union play in its battle to halt the German invasion? (The extreme winter weather stalled the German advance.)

INFOGRAPHIC
The Holocaust

When Hitler's forces invaded the Soviet Union in 1941, Hitler began implementing what he called the "Final Solution"—the organized murder of all European Jews under his control. At first, Nazi troops began rounding up Jews, executing them, and burying them in mass graves. Other Jews were sent to forced labor camps, where many were worked to death. But the Nazis were not satisfied with the pace of these ruthless murders. Beginning in 1942, they began to force Jews from Nazi-occupied Europe into specially designed death camps. By 1945, the Nazis had mercilessly killed some six million Jews—nearly two thirds of all European Jews.

His army was still suffering from the purges that had wiped out many of its top officers. The Soviets lost two and a half million soldiers trying to fend off the invaders. As they were forced back, Soviet troops destroyed factories and farm equipment and burned crops to keep them out of enemy hands. But they could not stop the German war machine. By autumn, the Nazis had smashed deep into the Soviet Union and were poised to take Moscow and Leningrad (present-day St. Petersburg).

There, however, the German advance stalled. Like Napoleon's Grand Army in 1812, Hitler's forces were not prepared for the fury of "General Winter." By early December, temperatures plunged to -40°F (-40°C). Thousands of German soldiers froze to death.

Germany's Siege of Leningrad
The Soviets, meanwhile, suffered appalling hardships. In September 1941, the two-and-a-half-year siege of Leningrad began. Food was rationed to two pieces of bread a day. Desperate Leningraders ate almost anything. For example, they boiled wallpaper scraped off walls because its paste was said to contain potato flour.

Although more than a million Leningraders died during the siege, the city did not fall to the Germans. Hoping to gain some relief for his exhausted people, Stalin urged Britain to open a second front in Western Europe. Although Churchill could not offer much real help, the two powers did agree to work together.

Checkpoint What caused Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union to stall?

Answer
It was stalled by Soviet resistance, the difficulty of the harsh winter and by Stalin's tactics of destroying equipment and burning crops to keep resources and food out of German hands.

934 World War II and Its Aftermath
Life Under Nazi and Japanese Occupation

While Nazi forces rampaged across Europe, the Japanese military conquered an empire in Asia and the Pacific. Each set out to build a "new order" in the occupied lands.

Hitler's "New Order" Hitler's new order grew out of his racial obsessions. As his forces conquered most of Europe, Hitler set up puppet governments in Western European countries that were peopled by Aryans, or light-skinned Europeans, whom Hitler and his followers believed to be a "master race." The Slavs of Eastern Europe were considered to be an inferior "race." They were shoved aside to provide more "living space" for Germans, the strongest of the Aryans.

To the Nazis, occupied lands were an economic resource to be plundered and looted. The Nazis systematically stripped conquered nations of their works of art, factories, and other resources. To counter resistance movements that emerged in occupied countries, the Nazis took savage revenge, shooting hostages and torturing prisoners.

But the Nazis' most sinister plans centered on the people of the occupied countries. During the 1930s, the Nazis had sent thousands of Jewish people and political opponents to concentration camps, detention centers for civilians considered enemies of the state. Over the course of the war, the Nazis forced these people, along with millions of Polish and Soviet Slavs and people from other parts of Europe, to work as slave laborers. Prisoners were poorly fed and often worked to death.

Instruct

■ Introduce Direct students' attention to the photograph of Jewish families being led off by Nazi soldiers in the Infographic on the Holocaust. Discuss the emotions shown on the people's faces. Ask students to predict what this photograph reveals about how the Nazis treated the civilians they conquered.

■ Teach Ask What ideology was the basis for the Nazis' brutal treatment of conquered peoples? (belief that so-called Aryans, especially Germans, were a superior race and that all others were inferior; especially Jews, Slavs, and the Roma.) How did the Nazis put these beliefs into practice? (They forced conquered peoples from these groups into slave labor in work camps and in concentration camps; millions were systematically killed. They also targeted political opponents, the elderly, the disabled, and homosexuals.)

■ Quick Activity Discuss the issue of who bears the greatest responsibility for the murders committed in the German "death camps"—Hitler and the few other top officials who developed the plan to create the camps and execute people, or the many people who carried out that effort by running the camps under orders.

Note Taking

Reading Skill: Identify Supporting Details. In a concept web like the one below, fill in details about how the Nazis and Japanese military treated people under their power during World War II. Add circles as necessary.

Connect to Our World

Connections to Today Along with other valuables, the Nazis often took works of art as plunder. At the end of the war, the Soviet army also seized art as reparations, while it occupied Germany. The government returned some of the art to East Germany. Other artworks remained in Russia, hidden or forgotten.

In 1991, the director of the Hermitage Museum in St. Petersburg stumbled across more than 70 works of art by various masters taken from German museums and private collectors. The Hermitage exhibited these works in March 1995. Although the museum agreed to return some of the art to the heirs of the original collectors, the Russian government blocked the move. It still regarded the art taken from Germany as reparations for the great damage done to the Soviet Union during World War II.

Answers

Thinking Critically

1. In Poland near the work camps, it shows that all detainees might eventually be moved from work camps to death camps and reveals the Nazis' ruthless policies toward Slavs and Central European Jews.

2. It depicts the dramatic drop in the Jewish population of Europe.
